

Grandparent Story Visit Kit

Twelve adult-led visit quests for screen-free invented stories and take-home postcards.

Audience: Grandparents, relatives, neighbor helpers, library family visit tables, and homeschool co-op family days.

Format: 12 printable visit quests plus host guide tools, visit formats, and take-home postcards

No scary harm, no bullying, no romance, no weapons, no branded characters, no real child profiles.

$31

Included

- 12 printable visit quest pages
- Visit setup guide
- Story hosting notes
- Quiet participation options
- No-data use notes
- Take-home handoff notes
- Pack reset notes
- Six repeatable visit formats
- Twelve take-home story postcards
- Eight optional family-share prompts
- Provider-ready PDF and ZIP artifact

Start the visit story

Visit setup

- Print one host guide, six visit format cards, a postcard stack, and extra blank half-sheets before the visit table opens.
- Place pencils, object choice slips, pretend place strips, and plain folders where the adult host can pass them out one step at a time.
- Choose three ordinary object starters such as a button, spoon, seed packet, paper clip, teacup, or ribbon before the first story begins.
- Prepare one quiet seat with a pencil, sketch space, and two simple choice strips for anyone who wants to join without speaking first.
- Use color tabs, table symbols, or blank folders for sorting instead of personal labels.
- Keep the kit screen-free by using only printed pages, spoken choices, sketches, pointing, and short written lines.

Story hosting

- Open with an invented helper, a pretend place, and one ordinary object so the story starts in make-believe space.
- Model one sample answer that is clearly invented, then invite writers to choose by pointing, sketching, dictating, or writing.
- Move through the page in small cooperative steps: place, helper, object, small mix-up, next action, and calm ending.
- Offer two adult-made choices when a writer pauses, and let the writer pick, change, combine, or invent a third option.
- Keep sharing optional and focused on a title, object clue, sketch, or one invented sentence from the printed page.
- Use gentle table language such as maker, guide, visitor, helper, messenger, keeper, or builder for every pretend role.

Quiet participation

- Let a participant complete only one blank, circle one choice, or draw one clue and still count the page as finished.
- Offer a silent postcard path where the writer fills the pretend place and object blanks before any table talk.
- Allow an adult to write a dictated phrase while the writer chooses the words, points to options, or sketches the clue.
- Accept a folded page, underlined word, or shown sketch as complete sharing when reading aloud is not preferred.
- Keep a spare fresh page nearby so a writer can restart without explanation if the first idea feels too crowded.
- Invite partners to trade only invented object ideas, not personal details, when they want a cooperative prompt.

No-data use

- This kit uses invented helpers, pretend places, and ordinary objects; private facts are not needed.
- Keep every page offline, printable, and handled by the host, writer, or household after the visit.
- Do not collect private identifiers, personal labels, personal timelines, or household details.
- Organize pages with symbols, colors, or plain folders instead of person-specific sorting.
- Send finished work home or let the writer keep it at the table; the host does not need to retain copies.

Take-home handoff

- Send home one finished visit page plus one optional story postcard for another screen-free writing moment.
- Mark one simple next step such as add a title, add one setting detail, add one object clue, or finish the ending.
- Tell households the postcard can be completed by pointing, sketching, dictating, or writing one short line.
- Keep home sharing optional and focused on the printed page, invented place, ordinary object, title, or calm ending.
- Invite the writer to save unused postcards for another table visit without requiring any follow-up report.

Pack reset

- Return unused format cards and postcards to the host folder before clearing pencils and choice strips.
- Place finished pages in plain take-home folders or let writers carry their own pages.
- Restock blank pages, sharpen pencils, and replace bent choice strips before the next visit table.
- Move used sample slips behind the host guide so the next host can begin with a fresh top card.
- Write only a nonpersonal supply note if needed, such as more pencils, fewer object slips, or extra quiet pages.

Use one quest at a time. Keep every detail invented, printable, and offline.

Image-backed visit quest menu

Pick one quest at a time. Each page uses an invented world image so visit-table details become fiction without online sharing.

AGES 7-8
Teacup Town Weather Window

AGES 7-9
Spoon Ferry Lunchbox Harbor

AGES 7-9
Pocket Park Notice Board

AGES 7-9
Button Bakery Map Mix-Up

AGES 7-9
Penny Path Compass Shop

AGES 8-10
Tidepool Timekeepers Lab

AGES 8-10
Greenhouse Gear Garden

AGES 8-10
Pantry Measurement Mystery

AGES 8-10
Rain Gauge Railway

AGES 8-10
Seed Library Map Room

AGES 10-11
Revision River Ferry

AGES 10-11
Clue Label Tower Museum

Repeatable visit formats and optional family-share prompts

Teacup Map Story

Best for: A cozy table visit where an adult host and writer want a pretend place before the first sentence.

1. Host places one teacup, button, or paper circle on the table and asks for a pretend place it could mark: _____.
2. Writer adds an invented helper who visits that place for a small friendly errand: _____.
3. Host offers two object choices and the writer picks one to become the clue: _____.
4. Together they write one opening sentence and circle the detail to keep: _____.

Button Messenger Visit

Best for: Grandparent-style visits, neighbor-helper tables, and co-op family days with gentle back-and-forth writing.

1. Host gives the writer a button card and asks what pretend message it carries: _____.
2. Writer chooses an invented messenger role such as guide, maker, keeper, or builder: _____.
3. Host asks where the messenger should deliver the object in a pretend town: _____.
4. Together they write the next action and leave the ending blank for later: _____.

Kitchen Drawer Quest

Best for: Library family visit tables that need familiar object choices and no special supplies.

1. Host spreads three printed object slips from an imaginary kitchen drawer and asks the writer to choose one: _____.
2. Writer invents a tiny mix-up the object can help solve kindly: _____.
3. Host models one sentence using a different object so the writer can make a fresh choice: _____.
4. Writer adds first, next, and last story beats on the visit page: _____.

Porch Lantern Postcard

Best for: A quieter visit where the writer wants a small postcard instead of a full page.

1. Host points to the lantern picture space and asks what make-believe place it lights up: _____.
2. Writer sketches or writes one ordinary object waiting under the lantern: _____.
3. Host offers a calm helper choice and asks what the helper notices first: _____.
4. Writer completes one postcard line and chooses whether to share the title: _____.

Three-Chair Story Circle

Best for: Homeschool co-op family days with one adult host and a small group of mixed-age writers.

1. Host labels three chair spaces as place, object, and helper, then asks writers to fill the first blank: _____.
2. Each writer adds one invented object idea to the shared choice page: _____.
3. Host reads the choices aloud and lets each writer pick a different path for a private page: _____.
4. Writers finish with one calm ending line or one ending sketch: _____.

Tiny Shopkeeper Scene

Best for: A playful adult-led visit with pretend places, ordinary supplies, and cooperative sentence building.

1. Host names an imaginary tiny shop and asks the writer what useful object sits in the window: _____.
2. Writer invents a shopkeeper, helper, or visitor who needs that object for a kind task: _____.
3. Host asks what small mix-up happens when the object is used in a surprising way: _____.
4. Together they write one dialogue line and one next action: _____.

Optional share prompts

- Show one invented place from the visit page: _____.
- Read one sentence aloud, or ask a grown-up to read it: _____.
- Point to one ordinary object and tell how it helps the helper: _____.
- Share one title choice for the postcard story: _____.
- Tell which story step came first, next, or last: _____.
- Show one sketch and name the invented clue inside it: _____.
- Describe one calm ending choice from the make-believe story: _____.
- Keep the page private today and mark one finished detail: _____.

Take-home story postcards

6 MINUTES | SETTING DETAIL

Pretend Porch Place

Invent a porch, table, garden step, or window nook for a story scene:
_____.

A grown-up can ask what the pretend place looks or sounds like:
_____.

6 MINUTES | CHARACTER ACTION

Invented Helper Card

Create an invented helper who solves a tiny friendly mix-up: _____.

A grown-up can ask what the helper tries first: _____.

7 MINUTES | DESCRIPTION

Teacup Clue

Describe a tiny clue found beside a teacup in an invented room:
_____.

A grown-up can ask which describing word makes the clue clearer:
_____.

7 MINUTES | IDEA GENERATION

Shelf of Surprises

List three ordinary shelf objects that could start a make-believe scene:
_____.

A grown-up can choose one object and ask what changes when it moves:
_____.

8 MINUTES | SPATIAL PLANNING

Tiny Map Mark

Draw or describe one mark on a pretend map and explain why it matters:
_____.

A grown-up can ask where the helper should go next: _____.

6 MINUTES | VISUAL PLANNING

Sketch Then Sentence

Sketch one story object and write one sentence under it: _____.

A grown-up can ask which part of the sketch belongs in the story:
_____.

7 MINUTES | PLOT CLUE

Object With a Job

Choose one ordinary object and give it a useful job in the story:
_____.

A grown-up can offer two possible jobs for the object here: _____.

8 MINUTES | SEQUENCE

Button Trail

Write first, next, and last for a button that rolls through a pretend place:
_____.

A grown-up can point to the step that should become a longer sentence:
_____.

8 MINUTES | DIALOGUE

Window Nook Dialogue

Write two short lines between an invented guide and an invented visitor:
_____.

A grown-up can read one role while the writer chooses the reply:
_____.

6 MINUTES | ENDING CHOICE

Kind Ending

Add a calm ending where the helper uses one object wisely: _____.

A grown-up can ask what feels settled at the end: _____.

5 MINUTES | REVISION

Clearer Word Swap

Pick one plain word from the visit page and swap in a clearer word:
_____.

A grown-up can ask which word is easier to picture now: _____.

7 MINUTES | STORY PLANNING

Next Visit Seed

Invent one pretend place, one helper, one object, and one small mix-up for next time:
_____.

A grown-up can add one extra make-believe detail to the seed: _____.

Teacup Weather Window Visit

- Choose a tiny weather clue, listen to one pretend helper idea, and write the first small scene.
- Offer two imagined weather choices, such as toast fog or button rain, then ask which helper should check the spoon window.
- turning a shared pretend choice into a clear setting detail
- 15-minute adult-led printable visit quest for a grandparent, relative, neighbor-helper, library table, or homeschool co-op family day.

Adult setup: Print one page, place pencils between partners, and remind everyone that all weather clues and helpers are invented for Teacup Town.

Teacup Town Weather Window

Visit story seed

The spoon window shows weather shaped like _____.

The teacup room has a tiny sound: _____.

The first forecast card says _____.

Talk-to-story choice

The visiting helper suggests checking _____.

I choose the Teacup Town helper called _____.

Our made-up weather job is to _____.

Tiny draft

First, the helper looks through _____.

Next, the weather clue drifts toward _____.

The helper says, "I can fix this by _____."

Visit wrap

The clearest weather detail we invented was _____.

One word I want to keep in the story is _____.

The next Teacup Town errand could be _____.

- Quiet option: skip talking and draw one window clue, then label it _____.
- Take-home line: Continue the Teacup Town scene when the forecast card changes to _____.

Spoon Ferry Lunchbox Visit

Send the spoon ferry across Lunchbox Harbor, choose one cargo, and write three gentle route steps.

Name two pretend ferry cargo choices, then ask which dock should receive the first polite note.

writing a beginning-middle-ending route from an invented conversation choice

16-minute screen-free visit quest for a family visit table, library drop-in, neighbor-helper activity, or homeschool co-op writing station.

Spoon Ferry Lunchbox Harbor

Adult setup: Print the ferry page, draw a simple harbor line if useful, and keep the talk about pretend cargo, pretend cafes, and story choices.

Visit story seed

The spoon ferry waits beside the dock called _____.

The lunchbox harbor cargo is _____.

The water makes a soft sound like _____.

Talk-to-story choice

The visiting helper thinks the ferry should stop at _____.

I choose the cargo helper named _____.

The polite dock question is _____.

Tiny draft

First, the ferry carries _____.

Next, the helper asks, "Do you need _____?"

Last, the dock note explains _____.

Visit wrap

The best route word from this visit is _____.

The harbor detail I can picture clearly is _____.

The next ferry stop could be _____.

Quiet option: trace the harbor path silently and fill one cargo label: _____.

Take-home line: Add one more ferry sentence about the dock shaped like _____.

VISIT QUEST 3 | AGES 7-9

Pocket Park Notice Visit

- Make a tiny notice, choose a pocket park helper, and write what the helper says after reading it.
- Offer two pretend notice ideas, then let the child choose which one belongs on the matchbox board.

turning an invented notice into a helpful character line

15-minute cooperative printable quest for grandparent visits, relative visits, library family tables, or co-op family writing days.

Adult setup: Print one page, offer a pencil, and invite only pretend park notices about tiny jobs, picnic lists, seed swaps, or bench clues.

Pocket Park Notice Board

Visit story seed The matchbox notice board asks for _____. The notice is pinned beside _____. The pocket park bench is made from _____.	Talk-to-story choice The visiting helper suggests a notice about _____. I choose the park helper called _____. The helper brings a tiny object: _____.	Tiny draft First, the helper reads _____. Next, the helper says, "I can help by _____." Then the park path points toward _____.
Visit wrap The notice word that helped our story was _____. The helper's kind action was _____. The next pocket park notice could ask for _____.

Quiet option: write only the notice headline and add one park doodle label: _____.

Take-home line: Continue the Pocket Park story with a new notice about _____.

Button Bakery Map Visit

- Find the mixed-up crumb map, choose one clearer direction, and write the fixed bakery route.
- Ask which pretend bakery object should be easy to find, then offer one direction word for the child to try.

using adult talk to revise one map clue into a clearer direction

17-minute adult-led printable visit quest for relative visits, neighbor-helper visits, library family tables, and homeschool co-op stations.

Adult setup: Print the map page, offer beside, near, around, and past as direction words, and keep every bakery clue pretend.

Button Bakery Map Mix-Up

Visit story seed The crumb map begins beside _____. The button roll tray is near _____. The mixed-up clue points toward _____.	Talk-to-story choice The visiting helper suggests the direction word _____. I choose the bakery helper called _____. The unclear clue should change into _____.	Tiny draft First, follow the crumbs past _____. Next, turn around _____. At the end, the bakery helper finds _____.
Visit wrap The clearest map word we used was _____. The bakery detail that helped readers was _____. The next map stop could be _____.

Quiet option: draw one arrow on the map and write its direction word: _____.

Take-home line: Continue the Button Bakery route by adding a stop beside _____.

Penny Path Compass Shop Counter Quest

Choose the pretend compass shop object, decide what it points toward, and write a tiny story problem that stays friendly and make-believe.

Offer two optional choices: a compass that points to a misplaced button or a compass that points to a quiet shelf; let the writer choose or invent a third option.

Turning a small object choice into a clear story problem

Adult-led visit table quest for a grandparent, relative, neighbor helper, library family table, or homeschool co-op pair who want a short shared writing start.

Penny Path Compass Shop

Adult setup: Print one page, place a coin-sized token or paper circle beside the pencil, and invite the writer to invent a shop helper without using real family details.

Visit story seed

The compass shop counter holds
_____.

The penny path points toward
_____.

The shop helper notices one odd detail:
_____.

Talk-to-story choice

The helper can follow the tiny arrow to
_____.

The helper can ask the shelf keeper about
_____.

The choice I want in my story is
_____.

Tiny draft

First, the compass spins when
_____.

Next, the helper discovers
_____.

The story problem is solved by
_____.

Visit wrap

One idea I liked from our visit talk was
_____.

One object I can add to the shop scene is
_____.

My story can continue when
_____.

Quiet option: circle the compass direction and write one shelf clue: _____.

Take-home line: Start another penny path scene with a pretend object that points to _____.

Tidepool Timekeepers Lab Minute Jar Quest

Pick the lab tool, decide what changes first and next, and draft a short tidepool scene with clear order words.

Offer optional talk choices: What does the lab tool show, what changes beside it, and what should the timekeeper do next?

Using sequence words to build a calm science-fantasy scene

Adult-led visit table quest for mixed-age family visits, library tables, and homeschool co-op days where the adult helps order three gentle events.

Adult setup: Print the quest, set out a pencil, and invite the writer to imagine a harmless lab tool such as a shell marker, pebble dial, or minute jar.

Tidepool Timekeepers Lab

Visit story seed

The tidepool timekeeper opens a minute jar labeled
_____.

Inside the jar, the tiny clue looks like
_____.

The lab table changes when
_____.

Talk-to-story choice

First, the timekeeper should check
_____.

Next, the lab helper should compare
_____.

Last, the scene should pause near
_____.

Tiny draft

At the start, the minute jar shows
_____.

After that, the tidepool clock makes
_____.

The timekeeper writes a note about
_____.

Visit wrap

One sequence word I used today was
_____.

One lab detail from our talk was
_____.

The next gentle experiment could be
_____.

Quiet option: number three lab clues and finish this line: clue one is _____.

Take-home line: Continue the timekeeper story when the minute jar opens near _____.

Greenhouse Gear Garden Kind Repair Quest

Invent a greenhouse helper, choose what the gear should help, and write one action that shows the helper being thoughtful.

Offer optional choices: the gear can lift a tiny shade, turn a seed tray, or ring a soft bell for the next helper.

Writing a character action that shows helpfulness

Adult-led printable visit quest for a relaxed table where an adult and writer invent a garden helper, a small machine, and a cooperative fix.

Adult setup: Print the page, place a pencil near any ordinary table object, and invite the writer to pretend the object is a gentle garden gear.

Greenhouse Gear Garden

Visit story seed

The greenhouse helper carries
_____.

The garden gear is shaped like
_____.

The plant table needs help with
_____.

Talk-to-story choice

The helper can adjust the gear beside
_____.

The helper can trade tools with
_____.

The most helpful choice is
_____.

Tiny draft

The gear clicks softly when
_____.

The helper shows care by _____.

The garden changes in a good way because
_____.

Visit wrap

One helpful action from my story is
_____.

One greenhouse sound I want to keep is
_____.

The next page could begin beside
_____.

Quiet option: sketch or list the garden gear, then write its job here: _____.

Take-home line: Add a new greenhouse helper who brings the tool _____.

Pantry Measurement Mystery Spoon Trail Quest

Choose three invented pantry clues, add one exact amount, and explain what the helper thinks happened.

Offer optional choices: a spoon trail, a flour dot map, or a measuring cup clue; invite the writer to pick the calmest mystery.

Adding exact details and cause words to a mystery scene

Adult-led visit table quest for a grandparent, relative, neighbor helper, library table, or co-op adult who wants a cozy object-based writing prompt.

Adult setup: Print the page, point to one safe ordinary object on the table, and remind the writer that all pantry clues are pretend.

Pantry Measurement Mystery

Visit story seed The pantry helper finds a spoon trail beside _____. The first pretend clue measures _____. The mystery shelf looks different because _____.	Talk-to-story choice The helper should compare _____. The clue could mean _____. The cause word I want to use is _____.	Tiny draft The measuring cup tips toward _____. Because _____, the helper checks _____. The pantry mystery becomes clearer when _____.
Visit wrap One exact detail I added was _____. One pretend clue from our talk was _____. The next mystery note could explain _____.

Quiet option: write the three pantry clues as a list: _____.

Take-home line: Continue the spoon trail mystery with a new pretend clue near _____.

Rain Gauge Railway Route Visit

- Use the helper's pretend choice to plan a rain-gauge railway route, then draft a short scene with a beginning, turn, and wrap.
- Offer one invented object, station, or weather clue; all choices can be made up on the spot.

Turn an optional adult choice into a map-based story route with a clear setting clue.

Upper-age adult-led printable quest for a calm visit table, library family table, or homeschool co-op family day.

Adult setup: Print one page, set out pencils, and invite the adult helper to choose one invented weather object or railway stop.

Visit story seed The visit table becomes a rainy railway when the helper chooses _____. An ordinary object near the table turns into a station sign for _____. The pretend weather note on the ticket warns about _____.	Talk-to-story choice Ask the helper to choose one invented railway job: _____. The choice changes the route because _____. The optional talk detail I will turn into a story clue is _____.	Tiny draft First, the rain-gauge train stops at _____. Then the conductor notices _____. The helper's choice changes the story by _____.
Visit wrap My favorite invented clue from the visit is _____. One sentence I can make clearer is _____. The ending leaves the railway near _____.
Quiet option: skip the talk choice and pick one printed object card: _____. Take-home line: Later, add one new pretend weather station called _____.

Seed Library Map Room Catalog Visit

Choose a seed-library clue, add the helper's invented map choice, and write what the catalog helper does next.

Choose one pretend drawer label, path, color, or map mark; keep it invented and simple.

Use an optional adult choice to connect a catalog clue, map mark, and next story action.

Upper-age adult-led printable quest for a relaxed visit, library family table, or homeschool co-op writing stop.

Seed Library Map Room

Adult setup: Print the page, place three harmless object prompts nearby, and ask the adult helper to invent one drawer label or map direction.

Visit story seed

The map room drawer opens to
_____.

The packet label describes a pretend plant that grows
_____.

The helper's optional choice adds a map mark shaped like
_____.

Talk-to-story choice

Ask for one invented drawer category, then write
_____.

Choose whether the seed helper follows a path, shelf, or return basket: _____.

The conversation detail I will turn into a story clue is
_____.

Tiny draft

The catalog helper opens _____.

The map changes when _____.

The next action is _____ because _____.

Visit wrap

The strongest map-room clue is
_____.

A word that makes the setting clearer is
_____.

The story can continue when the packet reveals
_____.

Quiet option: choose a printed drawer label and write the map clue here: _____.

Take-home line: Add a new seed-library catalog card for _____.

Revision River Ferry Keep Move Trim Visit

Draft a ferry sentence, use the helper's invented revision choice, and rewrite one line so the ending is clearer.

Choose keep, move, or trim for one pretend ferry detail, then ask where that detail belongs in the ending.

Revise an invented ferry scene after an adult helper chooses one detail to keep, move, or trim.

Adult-led upper-age printable quest for a cooperative visit table where sharing is optional and revision stays low-pressure.

Adult setup: Print the page, set out pencils, and offer three paper choices: keep a detail, move a detail, or trim a detail.

Visit story seed The ferry carries a draft crate labeled _____. The first dock shows a scene detail I might keep: _____. The river sign points toward an ending about _____.	Talk-to-story choice Ask the helper to choose keep, move, or trim for this detail: _____. The choice changes my next sentence by _____. The detail that should echo near the ending is _____.	Tiny draft My first ferry sentence is _____. I revise it by adding, moving, or trimming _____. My clearer sentence becomes _____.
Visit wrap The revision move I used today is _____. The story is easier to follow because _____. The ferry can land at _____.

Quiet option: choose keep, move, or trim silently and mark the detail here: _____.

Take-home line: Later, revise one more ferry sentence about _____.

Clue Label Tower Exhibit Visit

Build a pretend tower exhibit, pick the clue that matters first, and draft a label that guides the reader into the scene.

Choose one color, shape, sound, texture, or object clue; the exhibit can be completely made up.

Select one precise clue and turn it into a concise invented exhibit label.

Adult-led upper-age printable quest for a visit table, library family station, or homeschool co-op display activity.

Adult setup: Print the page, point to any safe ordinary object or printed object card, and invite the adult helper to choose one invented clue.

Clue Label Tower Museum

Visit story seed

The tower exhibit holds an ordinary object called _____.

The clue label points readers toward _____.

The helper's invented clue is a color, shape, sound, or texture: _____.

Talk-to-story choice

Ask the helper to choose which clue matters first: _____.

The clue I will leave in the background is _____.

The label should make visitors wonder about _____.

Tiny draft

My exhibit label begins with _____.

The label explains the clue by saying _____.

The scene changes when a visitor notices _____.

Visit wrap

The clearest label word is _____.

One extra detail I can save for later is _____.

The next exhibit in the tower could be _____.

Quiet option: skip discussion and write only the final exhibit label here: _____.

Take-home line: Make a pretend label for one safe ordinary object: _____.