Connection coaching

Binder Ring Story Connection Adult Guide:

- Set out one binder ring connection card, blank paper, pencil, and a small paper ring mark for the adult-led fictional offline paper-only session:
- Label six paper lines detail, connects to, because, second detail, bridge sentence, and binder ring check before the writer begins:
- Choose one made-up story moment from a place like Nettlewick Hall or Mallowgate Yard and keep every detail invented:
- Tell the writer that pointing, dictating, adult-scribed phrases, or short independent writing all fit this family-friendly paper activity:
- Close by rereading the bridge sentence and binder ring check from the paper card only:

Facilitation notes

- Start with one small detail so the writer has a clear paper anchor:
- Ask what the detail connects to before asking because, so the story link forms in a calm order:
- Use the because line to explain the connection with one invented reason:
- Add the second detail only after the first detail and connects to line feel clear on paper:
- Treat the binder ring check as a quiet close to the bridge sentence, not a correction mark:

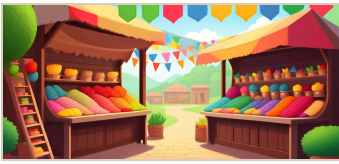

Safety notes

- Use only invented names, made-up places, pretend objects, and fictional story details:
- Skip any prompt that asks for personal facts, exact place facts, outside facts, or child identity clues:
- Keep the activity adult-led, offline, paper-only, and away from audience pressure:
- Keep every bridge sentence about the pretend story, not about a person outside the card:
- Use the binder ring check as a paper sorting mark for one fictional connection:

Use one story connection card at a time. Keep every connection sentence broad, invented, paper-only, and guided by an adult.

Sixteen connection card worlds

Pick a world image, then name the first detail, connection, because line, second detail, bridge sentence, and binder ring check.
