- Keep every example made-up, broad, offline, printable, and guided by an adult.
- Use one sticky note for each tone move so the writer can move, compare, and revise small pieces without crowding the page.
- Replace narrow outside details with pretend names, broad story places, and invented objects before writing begins.
- End each activity by choosing the revised sentence that makes the story feel calm, curious, cheerful, formal, playful, or gentle on the page.
